Since no two weddings are alike, Kristal Clear Dance Steps tailors every detail of the dance routine to your requests and specific situation. Some common factors to consider when choreographing your routine are:

- How many people will be dancing?

- How much time do we have to practice?
- Will there be props?
- How long will the choreographed dance be?

About Your Instructor

Kristal Young has been dancing since the age of three, starting with the classic styles of ballet, tap and jazz for ten years and later branching out to the more modern genres of hip-hop, rock, & poms.

Throughout her college career, she danced on Power Surge, the dance team for the men's and women's basketball teams at Wisconsin Lutheran College. Her dancing entertained crowds at games and parades, she choreographed dance routines to perform and led her team as co-captain. Kristal and her team competed in the International Cup of the Americas in Acapulco, Mexico taking first place in 2000 and second place in 2003.

In the summer of 2001 before this new wedding trend hit, Kristal choreographed and led, her first surprise dance routine to help her best friend who was in charge of "getting everybody motivated to dance," at her sister's wedding. The surprised guests who saw the bridesmaids and friends perform to "Can't Fight The Moonlight," by LeAnn Rimes had never seen anything like it.

Since then she has choreographed and taught dance class at Next Step Dance Studio in Franklin, WI. And for no other reason than personal enjoyment, she's continued to dabble in new dance styles like salsa, swing, Irish, and belly dancing. Once a dancer, always a dancer.

Many professional artists are creative in more than one area of their life. Beyond dance, Kristal also owns and runs her Graphic Design company, Kristal Clear Graphics LLC. She found her first niche in the wedding industry with photographers when she introduced her one-of-a-kind "Designer's Touch Wedding Album." While that product is still going strong, it's time to add another creative service under her company:
